 Yale First Nation – Evacuation Alert Now in Effect

The Evacuation Alert is now in effect for the area from Yale IR1 through to Stullawheets IR8 (ending just past the gun range along Highway 1).

We are aware that the Fraser Valley Regional District (FVRD) has also issued an Evacuation Alert for the surrounding area. Please refer to the attached map to see the affected area.

At this time, this is an Evacuation Alert only. There is NO Evacuation Order in place.

An Evacuation Alert means you should:

- Be prepared to leave on short notice if conditions change.
- Have your emergency kit, medications, important documents, and essential belongings ready.
- Make arrangements for pets and livestock, if applicable.
- Continue to monitor official updates from Yale First Nation.

Yale First Nation leadership, our Emergency Coordinator, Emergency Management, and BC Wildfire Service continue to monitor conditions closely. We will provide updates as they become available.

If you have any questions regarding the Evacuation Alert or emergency preparedness, please contact:

Daryl Hansen
Emergency Coordinator

 604-206-7573

Thank you for your patience and cooperation. Please continue to check Yale First Nation's official communication channels for the latest information.

Stay safe and take care of one another.
